made with a locally grown, caught or raised product throughout the month. The dish(es) are identified on menus with a Localicious sticker or logo next to the item. When patrons order the "Localicious" dish, the restaurant makes a contribution to HAF's agricultural education programs in public schools.

In 2019 the HAF raised over $65,000 and had 104 classroom adoptions from restaurants that donated $500 or more. For the 2020 campaign, they hope to reach 300 restaurants and raise at least $70,000 for ag education with 110 classroom adoptions.

The Ag Education Programs play an important part in planting the seeds of interest in our keiki for an ag-related career that's needed to help increase local food production and safeguard the sustainability of our islands.

Hawaii Agricultural Foundation (HAF) launched Localicious Hawaii in 2014 to raise public awareness of restaurants that are committed to sustaining our local agricultural industry and through doing so, raising funds for agricultural education in our public schools. After it's first year, Hawaii State Legislature declared the month of March to be Localicious Hawaii month in support of the program.

The Localicious Hawaii campaign partners with over 200 restaurants statewide. Participating restaurants feature a dish
